Air Commodore Nitin Sathe, veteran helicopter pilot of the Indian Air Force, who has been part of many a daring rescue and relief operation over the years in India and abroad, volunteered to be in the forefront of action when the 2004 Tsunami struck, devastating Southeast Asia, and spent a whole year participating in the massive operations undertaken by the Indian armed forces to bring succour to the Car Nicobar Islands, restoring those to normalcy. He has penned down his momentous experience during the operations in this memorable book. This debut work has set him off on a successful literary career that has seen him author two more popular books and deliver talks on various topics.
