Born into a family of mostly armed forces members and his father an air force officer, Anchit Gupta, grew up loving the Indian Air Force and intensely passionate about it. Even while he excelled as a corporate professional, his passion for the air force never diminished and he continues to research and write extensively about it.

Anchit completed his schooling from various KVs across the country. He holds a B.Sc in Computer Science from Delhi University, an MBA and MS in Finance from ICFAI University, an MBA from Kellogg School of Management, Chicago, USA and the CFA Charter. He started his career with the global consulting Firm McKinsey & Co, about two decades ago before moving on to the Private Equity industry.

Currently, Mr. Gupta is the Managing Director of Private Equity Fund, Samara Capital, where his role is to acquire companies, help them grow and sell them few years later. Some of the companies they currently own include the iconic Paradise Biryani of Hyderabad, Sapphire Foods (which runs about 600 stores of Pizza Hut and KFC in the country), Marengo Hospital Chain and More Retail (3rd largest Food and Grocery retailer in the country) amongst many others.
